Frater is an international neutral language created by Mr. Pham Xuan Thai and published in Saigon in 1957. Its distinctive feature is the presence of two linguistic factors:

- While the grammar of Frater is completely isolating, thus having the character of some Asiatic languages (e.g. Vietnamese, Chinese, Malay), its vocabulary is taken from classical European languages — Latin and Greek with some elements from English, German, Spanish or Russian. The great advantage of Frater is its simplicity — the vocabulary is not large, yet you can create any word with a specific method of derivation. Frater has many compound words — a derived word is formed by sticking together two or more different words. They never change their form, they are only put together to create a new word.

- Another feature of Frater is its simplicity. Nouns have the same form as adjectives, adverbs and verbs. The key to success in understanding how Frater works is the knowledge about its word order. It is essential to put words correctly in a sentence, carefully one after another. Once this rule is memorized, you can understand Frater easily and avoid any misunderstandings.

Finally, there is this extraordinary linguistic phenomenon, that you can learn Frater quickly because of the real internationality of Frater words.

The grammar of Frater can be reduced to 12 basic rules:

1. In Frater, there is neither article, nor flexion, nor elision, nor affix, nor concord of tense, of mood, of gender, of number.

2. The noun, the adjective, the verb and the adverb have the same root.

3. The adjective is always placed after the noun with the exception of the cardinal numbers. The comparative of equality is translated with je (as... as); the comparative of superiority with plus (more... than); the comparative of inferiority with plusne (less... than). The superlative of superiority is translated with plasuni (the most); the superlative of inferiority with plasunine (the least). The absolute superlative is translated with tele (very).

4. The cardinal numbers are: uni (1), bi (2), tri (3), kuadri (4), kuinti (5), ses (6), sep (7), okta (8), nona (9), deka (10), senti (100), mil (1000), milion (1 000 000), miliar (1 000 000 000). The cardinal numbers once placed after the nouns become ordinal numbers. The multiplicative numbers are formed by adding the word tem (time) to the cardinal numbers. The fractional numbers are formed by adding the word unisur (one above) to the cardinal numbers. The collective numbers are formed by adding per (by) to the cardinal numbers.

5. The personal pronouns are: mi (I, me), mis (we, us), ni (you [sing.]), nis (you [plur.]), ili (he, him; she, her; it), ilis (they, them), antrop (one, they). The possessive pronouns are formed by adding the word ot (of) to the personal pronouns.

6. The verb is absolutely invariant in person and in number: pas (past) denotes the past tense; futur (future) denotes the future tense; intem (in time) denotes the gerund; probable (probably) denotes the conditional tense; the passive voice is formed by adding the auxiliary verb es (to be) to the infinitive.

7. There is no inverting in the following word-order of Frater, except in poetry: subject-verb-object.

8. Each word is pronounced absolutely as it is written: each letter has always the same sound.

9. The stress is placed on the last syllable of the word.

10. Compounds are obtained by the mere combination of the elements that form them, the fundamental one being always placed at the beginning.

11. If there is in the sentence another word having a negative meaning, the adverb ne (not) is omitted.

12. Foreign words, namely international words, if they are formed by the roots existing in Frater, change according to Rule 10. In case their roots do not exist in Frater, they do not change. They only take the spelling of the language.

For an extended grammar, see the book Frater, The Simplest International Language Ever Constructed by Pham Xuan Thai.

The original dictionary of Pham Xuan Thai, published in the book Frater, The Simplest International Language Ever Constructed (Saigon, 1957), contains more than 1000 roots that allow the use of a very extensive vocabulary thanks to the specific method of derivation of the language. However, as with any constructed language, the creation of new roots and terms is always necessary. Therefore, for this new corrected and updated version of the dictionary, sixty-five years after the appearance of the book by Pham Xuan Thai, I have decided to add a number of new roots, marked with the symbol +. In addition, the dictionary offers a large number of newly created words formed from previously existing roots. Sources for all these new words have been several literary texts and my own imagination.

Antoni Martí, 2022
